

The Midwest Claim Association was established in December 2016 as the successor to the Chicago Claim Association (est. 1918) and was developed to promote knowledge and awareness of claim issues to its members and the companies which they represent. Believing in education, friendship, and open cooperation is the cornerstone of the MCA, dedicated to providing members with educational opportunities in areas pertinent to the claim industry: latest industry trends, legal issues, claim administration, technology innovations, as well as networking with other professionals in the insurance industry in the areas of health, life, disability, compliance and worker's compensation visit the Midwest Claim Association website at www.themidwestclaim.com.

With that in mind, and even in the midst of our current pandemic, the Midwest Claim Association has continued a partnership with two great organizations with the same objectives: The Defense Collaborative, The Alliance of Women in Workers' Compensation, and has now added Enne Torres and WorkCompConference.

The Alliance of Women in Worker's Compensation was formed in 2016 when two women's organizations (Women in Worker's Compensation and the Women Executives in Workers' Compensation) merged to create a single entity. The mission of the Alliance is to effect positive change in the workers' compensation industry through networking support, mentoring and collaboration, providing opportunities for women to:

- Engage with accomplished industry professionals and build lasting relationships
- Enrich their knowledge base with tactical insights from speakers and panelists
- Explore opportunities and challenges facing women leaders today
- Encounter senior executives' perspectives on leadership
- Examine leadership strategies and how to effectively apply the strategies
- Empower ourselves to achieve success and groundbreaking results

The Defense Collaborative's goal is to create a circle of colleagues and friends from corporations, insurance companies, law firms and business partners who work together in the defense, liability, risk and claim spaces. This space will be an informal environment filled with creative ideas and questions and answers regarding cutting-edge topics. Facilitated collaboration with your current clients in conjunction with your current clients outside of an office setting as well as collaboration with people who are willing to get to know your company's business and your role within that business.

Unity is strength...when there is teamwork and collaboration, wonderful things can be achieved by all!
